The project will help 500 boys annually in the age group 5-14 to have a safe space to have their basic needs met. These children who are usually around the Sealdah Station platforms and are a mix of those who have runaway from homes located at the end of the train lines in Canning (on the south side) and from areas towards the Bangladesh border. Some of them have parents who working on the station platforms doing odd jobs – cleaning, selling tea, food or any jobs that help them to make a daily living. The children have little or no shelter, eat irregularly, do not go to school and are at risk of being forced into child labour and being at further risk of exploitation and abuse by employers.

D. Need for the Project:

A recent study conducted by CINI ASHA on the platforms of Sealdah Station showed that on an average day there are 400+ children who roam the platforms on their own, aimlessly and unprotected. A Booth has now been set up with support from the railway authorities to provide a one stop point of contact from where outreach workers will identify vulnerable children to prevent them from being exploited or abused by adults or older children.

CINI ASHA will refer these children to the organisation's drop in centre which is located on the station's premises where they can access the various services offered – shelter, food, clothes, basic health care, life skills education. Those that wish to pursue their education will be referred to CINI ASHA's half way house and after appropriate counselling and development of their social skills, will be placed in boarding schools to enable them to be mainstreamed into society.

I. Past Experience:

CINI ASHA has been implementing a programme of mainstreaming children into society through educational programmes for the last 8 years. Each year 100 children are put into boarding schools, vocational training institutions or supported in local schools once they have been reunified with their families. Each year 10 of them take their school leaving examinations. This year, two girls will complete their Bachelor's Degree (Hons) examinations and will be taken into the follow up team not only because they understand the psychology of the children but also they will be role models for them.

GOAL India, an Irish donor agency, has supported the education of the girls (Rs. Lakhs in 2007 while ChildHope (Rs. and Railway Children (Rs. , both UK based agencies have provided funding for the boys.
